Camp cooking in the Adirondacks Phebe Thorne

In the Adirondacks, "Great Camps" are those large, wonderful homes built in the late 19th and early 20th centuries as country retreats, where even today entertaining twelve houseguests for four or five days is routine. But how do you manage it without a lot of help and still have time to play and enjoy the guests? Author Phebe Thorne demystifies the process, sharing the wisdom that has been handed down through generations of cooking and entertaining at her camp, The Uplands.
